

TO BE HUMAN

A LOVING EMBRACE

FEBRUARY 21 & 24 AUTHOR IN RESIDENCE

Cantor Barbara J. Ostfeld will be facilitating the discussion at the book club

Barbara served for more than twentyseven years as cantor of congregations in Clifton, New Jersey, in Great Neck, Rochester, and Buffalo, New York, and ten years as the placement director of the American Conference of Cantors. At seventeen, Barbara was admitted to Hebrew Union College's School of Sacred Music. She became the first woman ordained as a cantor in 3,000 years of Jewish history. Barbara's memoir, CATBIRD: The Ballad of Barbi Prim was released to great acclaim in 2019, and her essays have appeared in Lilith Magazine, New Jewish Feminism.

BITES & BOOKS Catbird: The Ballad of Barbi Prim

BY BARBARA J. OSTFELD MONDAY, FEBRUARY 24 10 AM & 7 PM Facilitated by Cantor Rachel Gottlieb Kalmowitz

In Catbird: The Ballad of Barbi Prim, the world meets an insightful, opinionated eight-yearold growing up plump, nerdy and Jewish in a Chicago suburb. Three things make her happy:

singing, reading books, and going to Temple. Ridicule makes her afraid to open her mouth, even though she really can sing. But she persists, and with her awkwardness, anxiety, and fear in tow, embarks on an imperfect but continuing metamorphosis to become the strong, well-coifed heroine of her own story.

"To err is human, to forgive, divine." This oft-quoted line from Alexander Pope's poem An Essay on Criticism reminds us that no matter who we are, we make mistakes, and that if we expect perfection of ourselves or others, we are sure to be disappointed.

This recent High Holidays at Temple Beth El, those of you in attendance experienced a very human moment. I was sick. Not just a little sick, but very sick. And it impacted my voice, particularly for Rosh HaShanah.

When I decided which pieces I would try to sing Erev Rosh HaShanah, when I had the least amount of strength in my voice, I told the rabbis that I had chosen to sing the prayers for which it was appropriate to sound vulnerable. One of those was Hin'ni, probably my favorite moment in the HHD liturgy. It is at the beginning of the service, when the clergy stand in front of the ark and ask to be worthy of this responsibility, to be strong enough to bear the congregation's prayers up to God at this holiest of times. Singing that prayer, in its very humility and vulnerability, had never felt as earnest and true. For Avinu Malkeinu, a moment which for many is the quintessence of HHD, I thought I would sing the beginning and the end, which similarly could have impact with a broken, exposed quality. The middle part, when it gets strong and high, I had planned

"Beloved is a human being, for humans were created in the image of God; still greater was the love in that it was made known to us that we were created in the image of God" (Pirkei Avot, Ethics of the Fathers, 3:18) to have Elizabeth Esqueda take over. But when I got to that section of the piece, I couldn't stop. I felt all of my vocal and physical strength combine with the voice within and without that I call God, and I just kept going. On the top note, however, my voice cracked. In God's image, but less than divine.

I want to thank Elizabeth Esqueda, whose lovely voice you heard as soloist for many of the prayers on Rosh HaShanah; the rabbis, for covering some of the more congregational pieces and for their remarkable flexibility during our most stressful time; and my husband, for his constant love and support. I want to thank the members of the choir, whose friendship and voices lift me up; and I want to thank all of you, TBE staff and congregants, whose warm and loving embrace of me as a complete person allows me to be my whole, human, flawed self. May this be a year of self-discovery and health for each of you.

"Introduction to Artificial Intelligence" with Craig Matichuk

Craig Matichuk, Principal Solutions Architect with Alexa Auto at Amazon and a Brotherhood Board member will present a discussion of Artificial Intelligence with an emphasis on applications to the self-driving and conventional automobile industry.

The impetus for the formation of TBE Brotherhood (originally Men's Club) was to involve men in synagogue life and better acquaint them with Judaism. The group further answered a fear shared among Reform rabbis at the time that the next generation of male lay leadership would be lost. Lastly, it was another step toward Rabbi Leo M. Franklin's vision of TBE as providing social activities, as well as religious worship and education.

Rabbi Franklin envisioned the group accomplishing its objectives through social contacts, activities, and building a fellowship among group members. The article announcing the group's creation in the December 26, 1919, issue of the Detroit Jewish Chronicle described the Men's Club as holding the potential of being "a potent factor in [Detroit's] Jewish Community."

With an initial membership of 145, the group guickly grew to almost 700 members. It became a training ground for both Temple leadership and the leadership of Jewish communal organizations. The Presidency of Brotherhood often preceded assuming the Temple Presidency.

Triggered by rising domestic antisemitism and the events unfolding in 1930s Europe, the Men's Club began to emphasize Jewish solidarity. Brotherhood started fellowship dinners for members at which local Jewish and non-Jewish speakers lectured. It began a lecture series for the larger community where nationally known personalities spoke. It underwrote annual performances by the DSO at Temple and sponsored an annual Inter-congregational Men's Club Dinner — now in its 75th year. Brotherhood was a founding member of the Jewish Community Council, and co-sponsored numerous inter-religious events at area churches. It was a moving force establishing both regional and national associations of Reform brotherhoods. The Club raised funds toward the construction of the Temple on Woodward and collected money for both the United Jewish Appeal and the United Fund.

To assist Temple Beth El members suffering from the Great Depression, the Club established an Unemployment Committee which aided those lacking jobs to find employment, and other well needed services from Jewish welfare organizations. social The group further created a Vocational Guidance Committee to help those just out of school or seeking a change of career.

A critical area for the Club during the interwar years involved the support of youth activities. This included the group sponsoring a Temple Boy Scout troop, holding an contest, essay awarding college scholarships. and equipping the Youth Room at Temple.

The Club also held outings and dinners to strengthen paternal bonds with members' children.

World War II brought changes to Men's Club programming. Social events were opened to the entire Jewish community. The group hosted gatherings of Jewish refugees and dozens of orphans from Europe. It conducted patriotic rallies, sponsored blood drives, sold war bonds, and held metal and clothing collections.

The Club donated presents to 400 military personnel from Temple. It sent packages to Jewish soldiers stationed near Battle Creek and invited Jewish service personnel to congregational Seders and Temple dinners. Club members even gave gifts to 20 German prisoners-of-war of partial Jewish ancestry held at prison camps in Michigan.

War's end found the Club at the threshold of realizing Rabbi Franklin's dream for the group. It also saw the evolution of the Club's connection with Temple clergy; a symbiotic relation had developed where rabbis sat on the Men's Club Board and often proposed new and creative programming ideas. Club members served as the foot soldiers who made those ideas a reality. This relationship shaped the Club for decades.

Your participation is critical in helping us meet the needs of our thriving congregation.

After a wonderful High Holiday season here at Temple, this Bulletin will be filled each month with opportunities to build strong relationships, learn more about our tradition, celebrate Shabbat and holidays, volunteer to make a difference, and relish the benefits of a fun and caring community.

This is also a time for each of us to think about how we can support our Temple. You may have heard that membership dues cover less than one-third of our expenses - only through the additional generosity of TBE members can our staff and clergy continue to provide all the excellence and personal touches that make this our spiritual home.

Between the High Holidays and the end of the year, hundreds of Temple members will contribute to our Annual Appeal ... please join us in making a donation that will ensure that Beth El continues to be everything we want it to be. Just fill out the form on this page, or contact our Executive Director, Daniel Mesa, with any question about the Annual Appeal or about Temple. NICOLE FREHSEE MAZUR

EDITOR OF BABY AND BEYOND MAGAZINE

What's your background, Nicole?

I grew up in West Bloomfield, received my BA in History from the University of Michigan and my Master's in Journalism from Northwestern University. I always loved Rolling Stone Magazine, and had a subscription even as a young child. After graduate school, I applied for an internship with Rolling Stone in New York City and got it. After a few months they hired me as an editorial assistant, and I eventually got promoted to assistant editor. Around that time I met my now-husband Joel, and after a year of dating, we decided to move to Denver where I worked as an editor at Denver Magazine. We eventually moved to Chicago where I continued freelancing for Rolling Stone, as well as O, The Oprah Magazine, Budget Travel, Maxim, and various Chicago publications. Joel and I married, got pregnant, and decided to move back to Michigan to be near our families. We have two children, Maya (5) and Sadie (3).

What led you to your position as editor of Baby and Beyond?

Last year I met the publisher of Hour Detroit and he connected me with the editor who told me they were putting together a new baby magazine and needed an editor. We began the project in December 2018 and the magazine, Metro Detroit Baby and Beyond, was published this past September.

What was your favorite part about working on this project?

As the only parent on a very small staff, I came up with the content, hired the writers, edited and wrote a lot of the stories. I included articles that were personal to me and worked hard to make it relatable and useful. A piece entitled "Not-So-Great-Expectations" is a particular point of pride. It features seven essays, each from a different mom, highlighting the many ways your life changes after baby, from your relationship with your significant other to the way your pants fit (or don't). Before I became a parent, I had zero clue what having kids would be like. I wanted to help other moms feel a little more prepared.

How can our young families benefit from Baby and Beyond?

There's a lot of relevant, well-researched information in there. Throughout the process my goal was to help parents feel like they're not alone. Whether what you're going through is good or bad, you're in good company. Check it out!
