SHAKESPEARE'S DARK LADY
Amelia Bassano was born in 1569 into a family of Venetian Jews who were court musicians to Queen Elizabeth I. Drawing upon a wealth of documentary evidence, this controversial and provocative book unites Tudor history, feminism, and Shakespeare scholarship to demonstrate that Amelia Bassano was in all the right places, had knowledge, skills, and contacts to have produced the Shakespearean canon.

Shalom l'kulam—greetings everyone. Back in November I had the chance to visit Israel on a trip sponsored jointly through the Hebrew Union College (our Reform Movement's seminary) and Israel's Foreign Ministry. The trip brought seventeen recently ordained Reform rabbis and cantors to Jerusalem to explore contemporary Israeli society and how it has changed (and stayed the same) since we lived in Israel in 2010, 2011, and 2012. In our small group we met with members of Knesset (Ahmed Tibi of the United Arab List, Sharron Haskel of Likud, and Michal Biran of Labor), Orthodox rabbis, Palestinian activists, an Ethiopian-Jewish organizer, Jewish educators, diplomats, graffiti artists, experts in Israeli demographics, and more. Many of our speakers painted an optimistic portrait of Israel in terms of both domestic and foreign policy and cooperation.

Perhaps the most exciting group that we met with, however, consisted of representatives of HUC's Israeli rabbinic program, which is housed on our Jerusalem campus and offers a course of rabbinic study targeted toward Israelis. Contrary to the reports we usually hear, these administrators, rabbis, and rabbinic students described a thriving Israeli Reform movement. A movement with forty-five year round pulpits and sixty high holy day pulpits; a movement with a growing number of preschools with burgeoning enrollment; a movement that will next year ordain its one hundredth rabbi; a movement that has won key legal battles for acceptance in the state of Israel. The movement does continue to fight for recognition—and terrible threats leveled against key Reform leaders made the news several weeks ago—but alongside the news of perpetual struggle comes news of considerable gains.

I can only imagine that those gains will continue. We attended the ordination ceremony for five new Israeli rabbis and observed with some surprise the diversity in the audience that assembled. Not only did all kinds of spectators gather, but several people from across the denominational spectrum accepted degrees from HUC's non-rabbinic programs (focusing on pastoral counseling and pluralistic Jewish education). As more Israelis come in contact with HUC, its rabbis, and its other representatives in the field, so will they have the chance to discover Reform Judaism not through news articles of clashes and discord—but rather through moments of meaningful personal encounter.

I am delighted to have returned home to TBE and cannot wait for my next opportunity to return to our beautiful and complicated Jewish state!

B'shalom,
Rabbi Megan Brudney

Look What's Cookin'

When my parents visited from Florida, we decided to take them to one of my favorite new restaurants in Detroit, Grey Ghost. Reservations are a great convenience there as I did not want to make my folks wait. Grey Ghost exemplifies the epicurean cultural shift from meat and potatoes to meat and craft cocktails. With high ceilings, exposed pipes, plenty of brick and leather, the atmosphere is hip industrial chic at its finest.

The restaurant is located at 47 East Watson Street, the former location of Ye Olde butcher Shoppe in the Midtown section of Detroit. Getting there from the 248 is easy enough; M10 to the Forest Warren exit to Woodward. It's right off Woodward. As far as the parking, it's street parking and so far, we have been able to park on Watson, among the high end SUVs.

I prepared my parents for noise and "interesting" menu choices. My mother promised she would not ask for any food substitutions. They easily embraced the Detroit scene despite its sharp contrast to the dining room in their retirement community. Once inside, we were treated to a vibrant bar scene and a crowd that varied widely in age and hipness. Although it was a little loud and some of the tables for two are close together, we all seemed to get used to the tempo with minimal kvetching.

The wait staff was knowledgeable, attentive and enthusiastic. Even though it's a meat-centric place (their website invites you with the pun "we can't wait to meat you") there are vegetarian and seafood options. For us, the star of the show was the fried bologna on a waffle with sharp cheddar and jalapeno. Sharing it among four people was a little dicey. Ribs, yellowfin tuna, and a double cheeseburger were all great. We enjoyed the creative sundaes for dessert. As we left, my mother said, "It was great, I don't like to complain, but an early bird special would have been nice."

GOING ON VACATION? HOTEL AMENITIES ARE PERFECT!

Last year my husband and I received an email asking if we wanted to participate in a "Giving Circle" with five other couples. We knew nothing about it except that we would be meeting once a month, we would be asked to host one meeting, and at the end of our experience we would be required to donate $180 per person to a charity. Having very few friends in the Metro Detroit area, and wanting to expand our social circle, we hesitantly said ok. Our first meeting was held at one of the couples' houses – we drank wine, had a potluck dinner, and spoke about our previous experiences with philanthropy. Over the course of six months, our group continued to meet. We discussed what was important to us in a charitable organization, what types of causes we wanted to focus on, and developed a vision and mission statement. Ultimately, our small group donated $1,568 to Forgotten Harvest, and came away with not only new friends, but knowledge about our community's resources.

Why am I telling you this? Even though I think of myself as a charitable person (adopting a family during the holidays, volunteering my time in the community), this experience was unlike any other. Our Giving Circle forced my husband and me to think, examine ourselves, and learn. In today's technical age, donating money has become as easy as a click of a button. We go to a website, "click here," type in an amount we want to give, and press "submit" – many times without even having to take a credit card out of our wallets, thanks to servers that store our information. Donations require little time or effort. But there was a time, as recently as 5-10 years ago, when donations meant more, when tangible items were collected, and time and thought was required. By no means am I saying donating money is a bad thing! On the contrary, there are many organizations that depend on the generosity of monetary gifts. What I am suggesting is that philanthropy can have even more meaning when it is combined with more learning and intent.

In an effort to increase our collective involvement in philanthropy, I am pleased to announce a new Temple initiative: TBE's Giving Tree. Starting in January, you will see a nice collections area by the Chapel entrance, with bright signs describing this project. Every month, one of our diverse groups at Temple (such as the Brotherhood, Women of TBE, ECC parents, etc) will choose an organization that is in need of tangible goods. We will highlight our Temple group and publicize the organization's mission and the items to be collected. Whenever you enter the building, we hope you will take a minute to learn about our partner organizations, and contribute whatever item(s) you can. Together, we will demonstrate the value of intentional tzedakah and tikkun olam.

Why a tree? It is a perfect symbol to portray growth, the importance of a community, how everyone is needed to make something thrive, and that Our Spirit is Growing. Together, let's help others grow as well!

The Jews of RUSSIA

Join our Beth Elders for this special event with Rabbi Miller!

The Grand Choral Synagogue of St. Petersburg is Europe's second largest synagogue. Situated just a few blocks away from the Mariinsky Theater, it was built between 1880 and 1888, and consecrated in 1893.

Rabbi Mark Miller will lead a riveting conversation about the history of the Jewish experience in Russia.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 9

11:30 AM Luncheon ($10)

Discussion to follow. (Free of Charge)

Jews are believed to have first arrived in the Caucasus region in the Seventh Century and since that time the Jewish population of the Russia area multiplied exponentially. Jews, and Judaism itself, suffered greatly under Communist rule and since the fall of the U.S.S.R. more than one million Russian Jews are believed to have immigrated to Israel. Today, the Jewish population of Russia stands at approximately 194,000 - the sixth largest Jewish community in the world.

Nosh & Knowledge

Come participate in a Tu BiSh'vat Seder with Debbie Morosohk!

Saturday, January 28
12:30 PM

Tu BiSh'vat, or the Jewish Arbor Day, is observed on the 15th (tu) of the Hebrew month of Sh'vat. Scholars believe that originally Tu BiSh'vat was an agricultural festival, marking the emergence of spring. In the 17th century, Kabbalists created a ritual for Tu BiSh'vat that is similar to a Passover seder, and today many Jews hold a modern version of the Tu BiSh'vat seder each year.

Shabbat Services

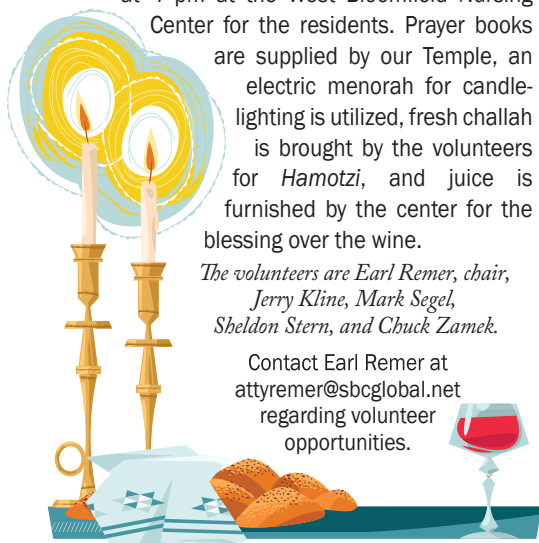

Your Spirit, Your Life, Your Temple.

Shabbat Services at West Bloomfield Nursing Center

Since 2009, lay volunteers from Temple Beth El have conducted Shabbat Services every Friday at 4 pm at the West Bloomfield Nursing Center for the residents. Prayer books are supplied by our Temple, an electric menorah for candle-lighting is utilized, fresh challah is brought by the volunteers for Hamotzi, and juice is furnished by the center for the blessing over the wine.

The volunteers are Earl Remer, chair, Jerry Kline, Mark Segel, Sheldon Stern, and Chuck Zamek.

Contact Earl Remer at attyremersbcglobal.net regarding volunteer opportunities.

Each Friday evening & Saturday morning, following services, we gather together to share in the Oneg Shabbat or Kiddush. Please consider supporting this festive gathering with a donation to the Oneg/Kiddush Fund.

To sponsor an Oneg or Kiddush contact Marianne Myers at 248.851.1100 or mmyers@tbeonline.org.

Ryan is the son of Jodi & Adam Becker, and the grandson of Arline Carris and the late Harry J. Carris, and Ricki Becker & Joe Becker. Ryan will be joined in the celebration by his brother Eric and sister Ellory, who are both very excited to share this special day in his life.
