TRANSFORMING THE WORLD FROM THE INSIDE-OUT

rabbi mark MILLER

On January 27, Temple will be hosting our 80th annual Glazer Institute! This has been one of my favorite events since the day I arrived at TBE, and I have always believed that one of the many important functions of any synagogue is to build and maintain strong relationships with our neighbors of faith. Our Jewish identity becomes even more solid when we share it with the tapestry of religious backgrounds in our community – Christian, Muslim, Hindu, Sikh, Buddhist, and more.

This year, we are eager to welcome Rabbi Dr. Shmuly Yanklowitz to our congregation. He is one of the most dynamic and brilliant speakers you will run across – an Orthodox rabbi who has broken down barriers and built coalitions that go far beyond the stereotypical reach of our Orthodox brethren. I have learned and taken action with him on multiple occasions, and he has become a frequent guest at Reform Jewish institutions.

Rav Shmuly has published many books, and his most recent project is a series that explores classic Jewish texts through the lens of social justice: “The Book of Jonah: A Social Justice Commentary,” “Pirkei Avot: A Social Justice Commentary,” and soon, “The Book of Proverbs: A Social Justice Commentary.” He has also written extensively on healing, faith, theology, and one of his personal passions – Jewish veganism.

For the Glazer Institute, he will help participants explore the relationship between personal transformation and societal change. As always, it will come through a Jewish lens, but be tailored to an interfaith audience.

In addition, we are taking advantage of Rav Shmuly’s visit to hold a special Scholar-in-Residence weekend at Temple! He will be joining us at services Friday night (January 28), and for two events on Saturday (January 29) – see the details below. I hope you’ll join us for one or more of these events!

Temple Beth El’s Glazer Institute is the longest-running Interfaith Institute in the country, celebrating Temple Beth El’s historic and growing commitment to interfaith relations. It is free and open to the community.
